

ABSTRACT

A method is disclosed wherein synthetic materials and elastomers (e.g., PET or rubber) can be carefully processed with throughput amounts which are so high as to improve the quality of the final product and increase the cost-effectiveness of the entire process. Process tasks such as mixing, cooling/heating (heat exchange) and de-gasing (exchange of materials) can be carried out simultaneously and with greater efficiency.